Local Guard Unit Off To Practice Part In Modern Bomb Warfare

Some sixty-odd Glades boys gathered at the Legion Hall Saturday morning at seven o'clock, with duffle bags, suitcases and hand-bags packed, and after a thorough inspection, loaded into two buses bound for West Palm where they joined other units of the 211th Infantry Regiment of the Florida National Guard on a special train for Anniston, Alabama.

Two weeks of drilling and a general spirit of anticipated gives these boys an inkling of what it's all about, and they will go more thoroughly into "action."

Considerable time was taken before leaving in checking all packs to see that they are done in "military manner" and according to officials supervising the project.

Major Ouellette, Jim Maynor, Dr. John Monroe, Dr. Hugh Rudder will be among those in charge of the program.

Ouellette said that Mrs. Rudder would be at the park each morning to supervise arts and crafts work. On Wednesday and Thursday afternoons from 3-5 p.m., work will be shown at the library.

Swimming parties from 10-12 a.m. are planned. Ouellette said, providing that transportation can be obtained. He asked that anyone wishing to furnish a truck could make arrangements by contacting him.

Maynor is said to be planning a tennis tournament for adults. Interested persons should see him. Square dancing is also in the planning stage for one night a week.

South Bay Drops Charges On White

Charges against Andrew (Jack) White, former South Bay police officer, and center of a major controversy in the city, have been dropped in the latest development in that case.

At the South Bay Council meeting Monday, June 10, the tabloids explained and the亨德森 told Eifers that no such charges were made by the City Attorney Claude Jones presented his opinions on the charges.

On June 4, Police Commissioner Henry Eifers asked Jones to review the law as it pertained to the White case. Jones verbally told Eifers that no such charges were made by the city council.

Lieutenant John Monroe was kept from going by the Doctor's orders. This left three officers of the two whom were officers in the company. Lieutenant Lloyd has just joined the staff and Lieutenant Chas. M. Tryon, Jr., has recently joined the staff.

The special train left West Palm Beach at 10 a.m. and pulled into the camp in Anniston at approximately eight o'clock Sunday morning.

Led and officiated by local eight boys, the most of whom have seen battle duty, Company "E" has a great many of the lower age group and a substantial number who are still in high school. The first year combat

"made" his Lieutenant from the ranks.

"As man proposes, man disposes"—as scientists find more horrible methods of killing each other in international "police actions". In organized warfare, other scientists, militarily trained, find methods of defending against these devastating new ideas.

Momentarily, tacticians may discuss the footsoldier, the infantryman and the man in hydrogen-bomb activities, but not for long, either in aggressive warfare or in the defense.

All tactical movements and defense have an important place for the infantryman. He puts the lid on the objective, "mop-up, consolidate and secure", or disturb the timing of an advance disastrously.

A modern rifle company carries more effective destroying power than many a battalion of World War I. Aside from the hand weapons, there are semi and full automatics, machine guns, mortars and defense) against tanks that equals the famous "88". They can "burn out" a pocket with flame-throwers, knock out a gun nest and stop a heavy tank and then pick off the left-overs with hand weapons.

Sherman had a definite idea of warfare, but what would he liken it to these days?

Anyhow, we're fine with ambulances, big auto-cams, and mongrel, and the hard way. Unfortunately, in the learning, they have do and will involve me and you. Might we not make right, but might we not also make wrong? Let's stay close to right, and we must be prepared!

So, our boys — the cream of the crop — must learn to defend themselves and us!

Our military thinkers, and who hasn't been a teenager in a system where every 18-year-old becomes liable for military duty, with the National Guard offering a substantial method for combining the completion of education and military duty simultaneously.

Physical fitness, discipline and regard for authority and respect for systematic planning are lessons that may be carried from Guard service into civilian professions.

Then a most important lesson — that peace is still appreciated by many of these youngsters — advocacy for "across the table" discussions that lead to peaceful settlement of differences, rather than the senseless, costly depravity of modern warfare.

Regular Army men supervise the short two weeks summer training of these Guard boys, and with Company officers and non-coms who have had battle experience, you may be sure they actually get some benefit from the simulated action they undergo.

These boys in uniform whom we see on the streets daily are satisfying their own military duty, and they're inspiring more breathless spirit for you and me, as well as all our military forces.

Sure, they're doing their duty, and they're doing something for you and me at the same time — let's think on that theme and remember that a "thank you" is a well done, boys, we're proud of you" sounds good to them.

We'd like to suggest that each organization in the Glades Area send a wire or a letter to Commander Jewel Bass, Co. "E", 211th Infantry, Regt., Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. It's a National Guard, Anniston, Ala., wishing him and his company — our boys — well. Tell them you're proud of them.

Beans: Planting of approximately 11,000 acres for fall harvest began in early September and continued through late October. A small acreage for winter harvest was planted from October through January and an estimated 11,500 acres were planted for spring harvest during February and March. General growing conditions were not favorable this season. High yield varieties were harvested March, lowest in November.

Cabbages: Approximately 4,800 acres seeded or set for winter production. Growing conditions did not produce favorable quality nor yields. Highest price paid was about $3.00-3.25 during March, lowest $1.00-1.25 during December.

Sweet Corn: Planting continuous from August to mid-April with about 5,500 acres for fall harvest, 6,000 for winter and about 2,000 for spring. Weather conditions never too favorable. Blight caused the greatest loss of production. Light yields and below normal quality prevailed during much of the fall and spring. Advantages of the different varieties are debatable, other than the noticeable preference

Apricots: Growing conditions were too favorable, although at times, the crop developed fairly good. Weather conditions caused impaired quality and yields. Highest prices received during the period were recorded during the first part of April for endive and in November for escarole.

Lettuce: Seeding and transplanting began in September and continued into March. Yield and quality impaired here, too. Harvest began in mid-November, peaked in January, and February. Harvesting generally with the exception of Romanesque was light and erratic from through the balance of the season. Highest prices paid for iceberg was $3.50 in late December; low $1.25 late January. Romanesque high prices were paid in late November, when it brought $2.50, while the low was $.90 in mid-April. High for Boston was $3.50 in November; low $1.25 in early April.

Peppers: Small acreage of Cal. Wonder type, probably the most favored variety of Italian bell type, was grown for fall. The late fall crop was damaged by cold late in December, but the winter crop escaped serious damage except for some disease development during the foggy mornings in January and February, peaked in January, and February. LAWRENCE E. (Okeelanta) WILL

FREDE AUNAPU ENTERTAINS ROYALTY

Lake Okeechobee in its early days might seem to be a most improbable place in which to meet European royalty, but Fred Aunapu maintains that he not only met, but endeavored to entertain one who ranked very near the top of the deck.

Now, Fred (pronounced Freddy) in case you are not acquainted, is the son of John Aunapu, the one-time man who operated the first scheduled freight boat between the lake and Ft. Lauderdale, and who later cleared and farmed the land north and east of the Belle Glade golf course. After the road from West Palm Beach to Belle Glade was opened, Fred, although still only a youngster, acquired quite a reputation as a guide for duck hunters. On the occasion referred to, Fred, in accordance with a previously made appointment, picked up a party of three men at the hotel and took them in his launch to a spot near Torrey Island where he knew the ducks to be plentiful.

From these sportsmen's demeanor, no less than from their appearance, he was impressed by the fact that there were men of breeding and refinement. Their precise, clipped Oxford accent indicated English nobility, while the expensive and ornate guns, engraved and inlaid, indicated affluence. Fred was particularly impressed by the circumstance that although all appeared to be men of importance, yet one of the trio, considerably smaller than the others, was accorded the utmost deference. He was even addressed as "prince".

Upon arriving within range of a flock of ducks the other two would invariably hold their fire until the prince had discharged both barrels, after which the other two would shoot. Fred, no mean shot himself, was amazed at their marksmanship. The prince, though good, it must be confessed was not exceptional. The other two, however, in spite of waiting for their companion to fire, never missed a duck. They knew exactly the effective range of their respective guns, and for each shell fired a duck plummeted down, a dead duck too, no cripples.

Ducks were plentiful and it was but a short time before the party had all they desired. Upon returning to the highway Fred was paid his fee. The one called "prince" was so elated by their success that he suggested an additional tip of $20.00, but much to Fred's disappointment, the pay-off man persuaded him that a mere $5.00 should be ample.

As to the identity of this notable, Fred was sure that he resembled pictures of Edward, Prince of Wales. Years later, the prince, now a duke, was governor of the Bahamas. Fred saw him again in Nassau and was convinced that the sportsman had indeed been the future king of England.

Mrs. Frieda McEwen Honored At OES Meet

Mrs. Frieda McEwen, West Palm Beach associate grand director was honored guest at the regular meeting of the Eastern Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, last Thursday night, and Mrs. Estie Robison, grand representative to the state of Washington was also welcomed.

A program was given in honor of Mrs. McEwen by officers who also presented her with a gift. She spoke briefly on value of friendships made through membership in the order.

Mrs. Thelma Norris, finance committee chairman, reported the recent barbecue and rummage sale sponsored by the order.

From where I'm sittin' by Joe Marsh

Average Americans

The youngsters at high school are planning a trip to Washington, D. C. Since they are going to have a look at more than just the monuments, they are going to see how people live in the different places they pass through. As I remember, a trip out of the country was something we just dreamed about when we were younger. We knew every body was different and thought people from out of town were different.

From where I'm sittin', it doesn't hurt us adults to get out and see how the rest of the country lives. We'd find the

Blackleg Attacking Cattle in Okaloosa

Blackleg, an infectious disease of cattle, has shown up in Okaloosa County and has been connected with lowland grazing in wet areas, states county agent F. A. McMillan.

Cattle are being vaccinated against the disease that is known also as black quarter, and quarter ill.

It occurs most commonly among calves or animals under three years of age. Exposed animals are usually removed to a new pasture on higher ground after vaccination.

NATIONAL GUARD

(Continued from Page One) were allowed to go to the P. X., and buy any supplies that they might need for the remaining two weeks of camp or any things the men might wish to buy. Monday afternoon the

(M/Sgt. Stacy and M/Sgt. Anderson, in charge of the recruits, took them to their first classes and training; the motor team, 57 mm rifle team and team all started going to their respective classes. After the men started getting their boots and tents ready for inspection in the morning.

Tuesday morning 1st Sgt. Roldan had the men up at 5 a.m. getting ready for another full day. They would break for their meals between their different classes. Tuesday some new classes started such as intelligence, radio and ordnance. Things are really starting to move.

Everyone is waiting for the camp week to end with the draw parade and then a pass to town. Then the following week the company area to move out into the surrounding hills and train in the open for a week.

Since the men have arrived at camp, the weather has been cool and cloudy which seems to build pretty good appetites. Most of the men have been talking about putting on weight, and of course, getting home.

(Editor's note: The remaining portion of the communiqué was written by a company officer, unnamed.)

This is my first year at camp as an officer. I believe that is the best camp we have ever had. That far, I have given four hours of instruction on interior guard duty, a subject that all soldiers must know.

I believe there is more spirit this year than ever before. The men are working hard and are free in camp. They have wide choice of recreation such as movies, swimming pools, bowling and dancing on the week ends.

Lieutenant Davis and Lieutenant Lloyd, company commanders and executive officers with Kevlar vests, know their men. I am learning a great deal from them. I believe everyone can see a change in the new men when we return on the 23rd.

They seem to show some signs of learning the Army way in life in only 15 days of training.

As Mess Officer, I can truly say that the men eat good and well-balanced meals. The menu is set up by Army regulations. Our cooks have also been trained in Army cooking.

Having served with the Air Force for 2½ years, U. S. Army for two years, U. S. Army reserves for 2½ years and transferred into the Florida National Guard, I would like to make a statement concerning our part of this part of our local and national defense which drew fire recently from Secretary of Defense, Charles Wilson.

As most people realize, training is of utmost importance to national defense. Since my arrival here at the P. X. I have been constantly amazed with the higher degree of training which these men undergo. As a matter of fact, I would rate National Guard combat training second to none in the country.

For me, it is a great pleasure to be with these men. I am learning a great deal from them. I believe everyone can see a change in the new men when we return on the 23rd.

It is with great gratification that we thank all of the wonderful people who gave so generously of their time and efforts in an attempt to save our beloved Rosalyn. No one could have done more... words are inadequate to express our feelings.
